

Results from the Global Food Safety Training Survey

Insights from Packaging Companies

The Packaging Industry Is Committed to Food Safety

75%

believe they have a clear vision for improving food safety

82%

believe they provide the food safety training needed to drive correct behaviors

59%

believe they are an industry leader in food safety standards

There is Always Room for Improvement

67%

say they still have employees not following their food safety program on the floor

44%

Only measure employee performance on the floor

32%

do not have a quiz/exam during training to verify comprehension

Packaging's Top 3 Food Safety Challenges

61%

cite "scheduling time for training" as a major challenge

40%

say "verifying effective training" is a big hurdle

26%

report "organizing refresher training" is challenging

Food Safety Training Best Practices

Use shorter training & incorporate "active learning"

Drive consistent, correct application with on-the-floor observation tools

Leverage software to identify training gaps & simplify recordkeeping

Reinforce classroom training with continuous knowledge boosts

Stronger Food Safety Equals Greater Productivity

80%

say their company would be more productive if employees consistently adhered to food safety programs

A strong food safety culture takes a commitment from leaders, managers, and employees to thrive.

Read the full report for more analysis and insights that drive a productive food safety culture.

Download at: bit.ly/GFSTS-2017