How Training Technology Lifts Safety & Productivity

66% of companies report employees are not following their safety program on the floor.

75% of leaders believe productivity would increase if workers consistently followed safety program.

30% of which feel it would rise by at least 50%!

Companies providing at least 20 annual hours of safety training are 68% more likely to have employees follow safety protocols on the floor.

But 59% of companies say finding time for training is their biggest barrier to developing a workplace safety program.

Companies using interactive audience-response technology create efficiencies to deliver 31% more safety training.

The Moral of the Story...

Use training technology to increase workforce productivity by solving the challenge to find more time for proper training.

Get the Full Report

Download a complimentary copy of the new report at bit.ly/safety-research. Use the research to benchmark your safety training program and implement best practices identified to improve safety and performance.

intertek alchemy